

Nowhere to Go

Iain Rowan

An ordinary man who finds himself caught up in a bank raid gone wrong. A murder caught on security camera where the victim doesn't exist. A man with just months to live, who is already living in hell but decides to take on the devil. A mob accountant babysitting a hired killer on a trip to the countryside, and a burglar on an easy job who finds it might not be so easy after all. A con-artist conned, and what a man will do when in the grip of an obsession more important to him than his own life. Eleven crime stories first published in Alfred Hitchcocks, Ellery Queens, and elsewhere by award-winning writer Iain Rowan. Eleven stories of what people do when there is nowhere left to go. Iain's short fiction has been reprinted in Years Best anthologies, won a Derringer Award, and been the basis for a novel shortlisted for the UK Crime Writers Associations Debut Dagger award. Shortlisted for Spinetangler magazines Best Short Story collection award.
